Luz Estella Nagle is a Professor of Law at Stetson University College of Law, teaching public and private international law, transborder criminal law, human trafficking, and human rights. Her career prior to teaching includes having been a judge in Medellín, Colombia, serving as a law clerk to the Supreme Court of Virginia, working as an undercover private investigator in Los Angeles, and pursuing software pirates as a member of Microsoft Corporation's Latin America Copyright Enforcement Practice.

An El Centro Fellow of the Small Wars Foundation and Fulbright Senior Scholar in international law in Tenerife, Canary Islands, Spain in 2019, her prolific multidisciplinary scholarship includes her 2017 book, Understanding Human Trafficking, Corruption, And The Optics Of Misconduct In The Public, Private, And Ngo Sectors: Causes, Actors, And Solutions (Carolina Academic Press). Professor Nagle has participated in rule of law, judicial reform, international humanitarian law, and regional security projects sponsored by the U.S. Departments of Defense, Justice, State, USAID, and the ABA ROLI throughout Latin America, and she has engaged government officials, military commanders, journalists, and human rights advocates from more than 80 countries as a legal expert with the U.S. State Department's Distinguished Foreign Visitor's Program and as a State Department-sponsored lecturer in Argentina, Colombia, Ecuador, Mexico, Panama, and Venezuela.

Professor Nagle is a member of the American Law Institute, the American Bar Association, the International Association of Prosecutors, and the International Bar Association, in which she is a Trustee of the IBA Human Rights Institute Trust. She is also a past member of the ABA's Criminal Justice Council and served on special task forces on international law issues and the Corruption and the Rule of Law Working Group.

Professor Nagle holds an LL.D. from the Universidad Pontificia Bolivariana, a J.D. from the College of William & Mary, an LL.M. in international law and an M.A. in Latin American studies from the University of California at Los Angeles, and two certifications in national security law from the Center for National Security Law at the University of Virginia School of Law.
