INTERNATIONAL
JUSTICE PROJECT

Are you passionate about international justice? Do you want to develop your international law research and writing skills? Do you want to work with a human rights or international justice organization on furthering their goals?

Then join the International Justice Project (IJP)!

IJP is an extracurricular clinic that provides legal research and analysis to international human rights and justice organizations around the world. This semester, we will be working with:

- American Red Cross: to create a community college curriculum on international human rights and humanitarian law topics, in collaboration with the LA Chapter of the Red Cross and the LA Community College District.
- International Bridges to Justice (IBJ): to create legal content for IBJ's eLearning country pages and modules for human rights and criminal justice defenders, in collaboration with IBJ headquarters in Geneva.
- International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC): to create a resource platform of international humanitarian law and conflict and humanitarian action in the context of religious and traditional belief systems, to support the ICRC Asian Regional Delegation's Global Affairs Department.
- Independent International Legal Advocates: to contribute to the development of a draft of an international environmental treaty called the "Global Pact on the Environment" to be submitted to the United Nations.

Apply online by Sunday, September 2nd
