S. James Anaya Award for Excellence in International Legal Scholarship

Inspired by S. James Anaya's commitment to promoting international human rights around the world and his significant contribution to legal scholarship, the Arizona Journal of International and Comparative Law created this award. The S. James Anaya Award for Excellence in International Legal Scholarship aims to recognize exceptional contributions to the field of international and comparative law through dissertations and other legal writings, especially those of international students seeking an SJD or LLM in the United States. Our hope is that by promoting the written legal work of students of international and comparative law we will help foster a legal community rooted in diverse and principled viewpoints.

This award is open to any currently enrolled or recently graduated (class of 2016) SJD student, as well as LLM students who have demonstrated a commitment to remaining in academia. Applicants will be judged mainly on their written submission, which may be on any international or comparative law topic. In addition to an offer of publication in volume 34.1 of the Arizona Journal of International and Comparative Law, the award recipient will receive $150 cash prize.

Applications should include:

- The attached application coversheet
- An article, dissertation, or excerpted dissertation to be considered for publication (must be an international or comparative law topic)
- A resume or curriculum vitae
- For LLM students: a short statement indicating a commitment to continuing in legal academia

Please email applications to ajicl.eic@gmail.com.

Submission deadline: July 15, 2016.
